Three Are Probably Fatally Hurt at Dupont Co. Plant

ROCKS LARGE SECTION

Identification of Some of the Injured Said to Be Impossible

KEARNEY, N. J., June 1.—(INS)—Two men were killed, three probably fatally injured and two missing today after an explosion that razed the nitrating plant of the Dupont Viscoloid Company.

Buildings within an area of half a mile were rocked by the force of the blast, which blew off the roof and puffed out the walls as if they were made of paper.

A dozen doctors with a fleet of ten ambulances were mobilized and the injured were taken to the West Hudson Hospital. One victim died a few minutes after being admitted.

Three others lay at the point of death while police, firemen and Dupont employees combed the debris of the building for the bodies of other victims.

The dead are Jack O'Brien, of No. 39 Davis street, Kearney, and John King, address unknown, a Dupont employee. Donald Davidson, twenty-five of No. 11 Howell Place, Arlington, suffered a fractured skull and thigh and was in a serious condition at the hospital.

Two others, so badly injured that identification was impossible, were taken to the operating table a few minutes after the blast, but doctors held little hope for saving their lives.

Two Classes Entertain Graduates At A Banquet

Over 100 thoroughly enjoyed the banquet tendered to the members of the graduating class of Bristol high school by the students of Classes 12-B and 11-A in the high school building last evening.

The menu, which was served in the cafeteria, consisted of: Fruit cup, chicken croquettes, peas, creamed potatoes, radishes, cole slaw, ice cream and cake.

The program of entertainment provided in the auditorium was novel and varied. The participants of the play, "The Rector," were: Walter Barrett, as the rector; Michael DeRisi, Clifford Snyder, Theodore Smith, Robert Hendricks, William Winslow and Edward Mariner.

A solo, "Together," was given in pantomime by Michael DeRisi, with Miss Dorothy Barnfield furnishing the real vocal power. Miss Barnfield, who was stationed in back of the stage, later came to the fore and received a splendid ovation. Miss Esther Singer was the accompanist.

The American Legion orchestra furnished music for dancing. The auditorium was trimmed in vari-colored crepe paper, and at the end of the room there was located a summer house likewise fashioned of the colored paper.

Mrs. Clara Tomlinson, of Elizabeth, N. J., was a guest on Tuesday of Mrs. L. J. Bevan, 120 Dorrance street.

Mrs. Josephine Chambers, Miss Elizabeth Chambers and Miss Edna Emmons, of Trenton, N. J., were Memorial Day guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ruehl, of Mill street.

GRAPHIC DESCRIPTION OF THE WORLD WAR'S FIERCENESS IS GIVEN TO DOYLESTOWN KIWANIS BY CHAPLAIN J. J. BINGHAM

"Fiercest of All Wars," Says Man Who Served in France — Says Fracas Was America's War Six Months Before Country Entered

DOYLESTOWN, June 1.—One of the most authentic and graphic descriptions of the fierceness and realness of the Belleau Wood fighting during the World War that has ever been heard by local people was given Tuesday before the Kiwanis Club of Doylestown by Chaplain J. J. Bingham, chaplain of the "Fighting Sixth" Marines, one of the crack outfits of the A. E. F.

Chaplain Bingham is now affiliated with the 108th Field Artillery, Philadelphia. Through a personal acquaintance, Kiwanian "Sam" Stilwell secured Chaplain Bingham to speak Tuesday night on the occasion of a special Memorial Day program. Invited guests included a few veterans of the World War.

For forty minutes, Chaplain Bingham held his audience spellbound as he related briefly the horrors of the recent war which he described as the fiercest of all wars and with hardships to the men more trying than any other previous war.

"Previous wars were fought in the daytime" declared Chaplain Bingham. "When night came, fighting stopped and soldiers rested. In the recent war men fought day and night for long periods of time without sleep. They lived in muddy trenches and faced thousands of machine guns, in addition to aerial warfare and gas attacks. It is a sign of ignorance for speakers to publicly state, as they have in some instances, that the World War veterans had an easy time compared to veterans of other wars. For that reason alone I do not hesitate to tell the true stories of the World War battles on occasions like this."

In introducing Chaplain Bingham, Kiwanian Stilwell said that in his opinion Memorial Day "is a day set aside for the fallen youth of the country, that the young men defend and the young men die in time of war, that it is for the young men killed in time of war that Memorial Day ceremonies are held."

Chaplain Bingham, in opening his remarks said that he could talk on many topics of war. He said that he always has thought that the late war was America's war six months before the country went into it. He said that it was just as much America's duty to defend Belgium as it was England's, in his opinion. As to preparedness, Chaplain Bingham said that much could be said at the present time. His opinion was that the United States should be properly prepared at all times, if peace is to reign.

The speaker did not advocate war. He made a plea for peace and for the survivors of the late war to play the leading part in bringing about permanent peace.

"We all have an agreement that

TOWNSHIP GRADUATES RECEIVE THEIR DIPLOMAS

Interesting Exercises Were Held in Methodist Church Here

MEDALS ARE AWARDED

"Have a purpose in life," was the message brought to students of the Bristol Township public schools last night, by the Rev. J. Purman Shook, pastor of State Street M. E. Church, Trenton, N. J. Rev. Shook was the speaker at the commencement exercises of the Bristol Township schools, held in the Methodist Church here.

Approximately 300 persons attended the exercises and listened to a very interesting program, the major portion of which was given by the students themselves. There were recitations, instrumental solos and readings, all of which demonstrated the versatility of the graduates as well as their accomplishments.

The 52 graduates were showered with bouquets and baskets of flowers by their friends in honor of the event. As the orchestra played a march the members of the class marched into the main auditorium and took seats in the choir loft. The invocation was given by the Rev. John Ellery, pastor of the church, after which there were words of welcome by George Zarr, principal of the Bristol Township Schools.

The program as given by the graduates was as follows:

Recitation, Sarah Paulsworth; piano solo, Vernon Caullwine; recitation, Anna Dougherty; recitation, Alice Amole; piano solo, Carolyn Betz; banjo solo, Norwood Lewis; recitation, Catherine Wilson; reading, Alma Ferrier; piano solo, Margaret Maurer; xylophone solo, Anthony Cashmer.

The address of the Rev. Shook was a very appropriate and instructive one. He showed the value of having a real purpose in life and impressed upon his audience the danger of becoming shiftless and worthless unless one had a real object and a real goal for which to strive.

The speaker compared the person without a real purpose in life to a rudderless ship at sea. He also cautioned that one's purpose must also be the right kind of a purpose.

American Legion School Awards, given by Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, American Legion, were presented on behalf of the post by Richard Fechtenberg and George Croner.

The award for girls was given to Miss Mary MacArthur, Edgely. The medal is given to the girl of the graduating class who best represents those qualities of character and ability, which, believed, when properly cultivated and matured, will result in worthy citizenship and well balanced womanhood.

The award for boys was given to Second Sabatine and is presented to the boy of the graduating class who best represents those qualities of character and ability which believed when properly cultivated and matured will result in worthy citizenship and well rounded manhood.

Jones Nature Study Award was presented to Alma Farrier. It was $5 in gold and a book on nature study. It is presented to the student who excels in nature study work during the year.

The second prize of a book for nature study work was given to Sarah Bintliff, and Sarah Burchell was given honorable mention.

BALL PLAYER IS DAZED WHEN HIT BY PITCHED BALL

Rowland Wislar, of Midway, Painfully Hurt in Accident At Hulmeville

WISHED TO CONTINUE

Injured Player Refused To Leave Diamond Until He Collapsed

HULMEVILLE, June 1.—Struck upon the head by a pitched ball at a game on the local baseball diamond, Rowland Wislar, of Midway, received a painful injury last evening.

The full force of the sphere struck the player, who was batting at the time, upon the left side of the head, just back of the temple. Although he fell to the ground, and seemed greatly dazed after the accident, Wislar's indomitable spirit came to the fore, and he was determined to continue playing.

Wislar's co-players and the fans were determined that he should not continue with the game, and found they had a task to keep him from going to first base. As he broke loose from the arms of those who were trying to assist him he made uncertainly for the first bag, and after staggering a short distance he pitched forward.

The player was taken to his home sometime after being struck, and a physician was summoned. It was announced at his home this morning that he is still resting, and it is not thought that the injury is serious, although he spent a rather restless night.

The accident occurred in one of the Tri-County League games, with Langhorne opposing the Hulmeville nine. Howard Black, Hulmeville, was pitching for the Langhorne team when Wislar was struck. The injured man has been playing first-base position for the Hulmeville men.

Exchange Club To Dine At Graduates' Banquet

The committee which has charge of the banquet to be given the graduating class of the Bristol High School, on next Thursday evening by the Fathers' and Mothers' Associations, is very desirous that the members of these two organizations who intend to be present, shall send in their acceptance promptly.

The price of the banquet is one dollar a plate, and the attendance is not limited to members of the two organizations, but members may be accompanied by friends if desired. An interesting program is being prepared and following the banquet there will be dancing.

Wishing to co-operate with the Fathers' and Mothers' Association in this effort, the members of the Bristol Exchange Club, at its meeting last evening, decided to dispense with the meeting next week and attend the banquet.

The postal cards sent out to the members of the two associations who are giving the banquet, has a return postal attached thereto, addressed to Mr. Asa Fabian. Members are asked to detach this postal, mark on it the number of tickets desired and mail it promptly.

A CORRECTION

In an article published in the Courier yesterday and which was furnished by Eastburn, Blanche & Hardy, real estate brokers, it was stated that the Landreth dwelling was built for Captain Burnet Landreth by James Martin, contractor, who was the grandfather of Mrs. Thomas Lawrence, of Cedar street. This, the Courier has been advised, is an error, and should have read: "who was the grandfather of Mrs. Thomas Longstreet, of Cedar street." Eastburn, Blanche & Hardy make the necessary correction.

LATEST NEWS

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., June 1.—(INS)—Misunderstanding of signals by the pilots of the freight steamship Kershaw and the passenger liner President Garfield caused the sea crash off the Island of Martha's Vineyard early today, resulting in the sinking of the freighter and the loss of from six to nine of the men. This explanation was brought shoreward by those who put out to the scene of the collision, off East Chop, some five miles north of this port. Both ships were well lighted and the morning was clear and, it was stated, both vessels exchanged signals prior to the smash.

WE'LL KEEP ON WONDERING

Why is it that women are so neat and men so sloppy? Barring only that bisection of the female clan which insists on wearing a boudoir cap to the grocery store, women never appear outside their own doors in one half of the slothful, shiftless, good-for-nothing array that a lot of good citizens of the other sex are continually seen in. Why is it?

Perhaps there is no particular virtue in being slicked up all the time, and certainly there is nothing so offensive to the hearty person of masculine gender as the well-oiled young man whose handkerchief protrudes from his coat sleeve, whose vest buttons look as if they had been massaged and manicured an hour before, and who can wear patent leather shoes six months without getting a lot of nicks in them.

But just take the average pillar of the community. Think about his collar for a minute. If he wears one of the torturous stiff white ones, it will be smeared or else wilted before noon. The soft collars fare little better, and the fellow who wears blue shirts, with collar attached, just looks as if he is on the way to the stable, no matter what part of town you meet him in.

This is all said in a spirit of humility. We realize that one man is at bottom as bad as another, and if one looks a little more perk than his neighbor, it is his wife who really deserves the credit. It is nothing that can be reformed, we suppose, and perhaps the women glory in their superiority, and wouldn't have the men-folk all spick and span even if they could.

But a person can't help wondering sometimes—why is it that a woman looks so neat, and her husband so doggone sloppy?

WASHINGTON'S LITTLE JOKE

A "tightwad" is defined by a United States government bureau as a man who saves 60 cents of every dollar, 37 cents of the balance for living expenses, and one cent each for education, recreation and gifts. The spendthrift is described as the man who saves nothing, and the thrifty man is designated as one who saves 20 cents out of every dollar.

There is no doubt that the man who saves 20 cents out of every dollar is a thrifty man. Perhaps the man who saves 60 cents is a tightwad. But inasmuch as the title of the pamphlet is "How Other People Get Ahead," the suggestion is irresistible that that is how other people get ahead.

If it is tolerable to make further light observation upon a subject so solemn in these days of high prices and normalcy, perhaps the government's experts will parade a few of these men who save 60 cents out of every dollar. The suspicion has been that if the coal dealer didn't get 'em the income tax collector did.

Success is just a matter of sound sense, common decency and advertising space.

The objection to humble people is that they always seem a little too proud of it.

Apparently there isn't room in one family for social ambition and a savings account.

Of course we are all idealists. Doesn't "our leading citizen" usually mean "our richest man?"

If you wish to inoculate a man with a swellhead, just ask his advice and let Nature take its course.

Dolores Costello in "OLD SAN FRANCISCO" is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Buckwell, San Francisco boss, with lawyer, Brandon, attempts to get possession of old Vasquez ranch occupied by Vasquez and his beautiful granddaughter Dolores. Their plot is disclosed by Terry, Brandon's nephew, who loves Dolores. Terry and Dolores have misunderstanding. Dolores falls into Buckwell's power, but is saved by Terry. Buckwell uses force to oust Vasquez, but is defeated. He then tries to grieve, but old Vasquez heeds Terry's warning and confronts Buckwell. The effort is too much and old Vasquez dies from shock caused by Buckwell's veiled threats.

Biting her lips to keep down the sobs and blinking fast to keep back scalding tears, Dolores removed the lace shawl from her shoulders and placed it gently beneath her grandfather's head.

Bowed in grief, she lingered to offer a prayer for his soul and noticed that the Vasquez sword was lying beside his still white hand. Without hesitancy she picked it up. Through tear-blinded eyes the family crest and famous inscription appeared dim and far away, but this superficial blur did not cloud their meaning. Dolores knew that she was the last of the Vasquez line, and her desire for revenge could not have been stronger had she been a man in the prime of life.

For the time being grief and sadness were put aside and in their place was born a terrible fury, a fury devoid of fear, perhaps an inheritance from her courageous pioneer ancestors.

"You come to taunt a noble gentleman," she said acerbically, the sword held fondly in her arms. "His soul is now with God, who is also a God of vengeance."

Slowly she rose from her prayerful attitude beside the lifeless form

Dolores followed slowly, still holding the sword of vengeance before her.

If her only relative. She was an appealing and pitiful little figure, so alone and brave in her sadness that it is difficult to understand why even Chris Buckwell's heart was not softened.

His nature lacked the "something" that goes to make up the inner things of life, and when Dolores paused a slight smile of amusement sufficed his face. Her pride and courage impressed him merely as an elaborate exhibition of heroics. Grief for the death of a grandfather was beyond his ken.

Angered by Buckwell's maddening indifference, Dolores glared at him with hatred blazing from her eyes. She scrutinized so long and intently that Buckwell was secretly conscious of a slight surprise at her grim wrath.

Hovering in the background the peon had been an awed witness to his master's death, and, over mindful of observing all customs in connection with the funeral, he hastened within the chapel to toll the bells that indicated the passing of a Vasquez's soul, and as he went he crossed himself devoutly.

When the first sound of the old mission bells broke the twilight stillness Buckwell's smile faded. He shivered perceptibly, uncomfortably from the ghostlike sound.

Dolores had not taken her accusing eyes from his face. "A Vasquez avenges a Vasquez," she said in a penetrating whisper.

Buckwell moved quickly. With sword upraised, as though it were a cross, she stood motionless. Twilight shadows played about her head and formed a flickering halo—as if she were sanctified to be the avenger of her blood.

A terrible awe and miserably annoyed by the mournful backing of the bell, Buckwell backed away. Dolores followed slowly, still holding the sword of vengeance before her and still silent and grim as if moved by some phantom spirit.

Buckwell can't shake off the fear that was clutching his heart. A flicking glance with religion of the supernatural touched his greatest weakness. The life of deception he had lead and the sins he had committed against his own race made him fear the vengeance of his own Gods as well as the possible ill will of the Christian deity.

Backing into a niche in the Chapel wall, Buckwell came to a stop and instinctively extended his arm in protection. His hand came in contact with something unusual to the touch and turning around he recoiled at the sight before him. It was a statue of the Virgin Mary! More awed than ever he turned away and resting his arm on an outside sill removed his hat to wipe his moist brow. As he did so he chanced to glance through the open window and his eyes rested upon a large crucifix. He stared as if hypnotized. The last light of evening filtered through the windows and gave the image a strangely lifelike appearance. Hastily turning away, he found Dolores still confronting him. So intense was her yearning to know what was right to do that she appeared to be in a trance, asking her ancestors—all represented by the graves in the cemetery back of her—to give some sign that would point the way to a just and satisfactory vengeance.

Buckwell feared no living man. The gruesome horrors of the underworld gave him not a quail, he had no respect for morals, he knew that his mind could triumph when matched against any of his contemporaries, but there was one thing that loomed a gervous and struck terror to his soul, and that was the Christian Religion or anything pertaining to it. As he looked around there were tormenting reminders of it on all sides. The image in the niche, the crucifix, the chapel bells, the graveyard and the lovely figure of Dolores with upraised sword which resembled an avenging angel.

The peon did not cease ringing the mournful deathknell and without warning he pulled harder on the bell rope and the clamor was deafening to Buckwell, who stood below as though petrified by the sound.

"Stop those accursed Christian bells!" he shouted, covering his ears to shut out the clamor. It was perhaps a touch of the childish oriental superstition in Buckwell that made him fear an unknown punishment from the Gods he had ignored while pretending to be an irreproachable Christian.

"No, they are ringing for Grandfather," said Dolores distinctly. "He would want them to ring. It is a message to touch of his soul is coming." Her chin quivered and tears flooded her eyes.

The bells seemed to chime louder and louder and Buckwell's expression became more and more terrified. As his terror grew the mask of western veneer, that he had so painstakingly trained his features to assume, vanished. The heathen soul of the Mongol was revealed. It was the first time outside of his own quarters that Chris Buckwell had been thrown off guard. His features sagged, his eyes became squinting slits and even his long carefully trained moustache drooped. His was unmistakably the face of a Chinaman peering at Dolores as though he were compelled to confront all the evils of his own belief and conscience. It was a horrified countenance, livid and stricken.

If Dolores had suddenly been given a glimpse into another world peopled by strange beings she could not have been more startled and amazed than at that momentary flash of Chris Buckwell, the Chinaman.

"Oh! You hideous thing!" she breathed in repulsion. A terrible revulsion of feeling took possession of her. The man she and her grandfather had trusted and honored with their hospitality was nothing more than an Oriental! He had held her in his arms—touched her with his lips! It was all too hideous to think about, and without warning Dolores—the last of the famous old family—bore down upon him, with the great sword, determined to avenge the insult.

A new horror seized Buckwell when he realized that he had dropped his mask and revealed his real self to Dolores. Aroused to action by her menacing approach, coupled with the realization that his secret had been discovered, he turned and ran from the mission like a man fleeing from a wild beast. The mournful deathknell followed him down the hill and far along the road on his way back to town.

With intense vehemence Buckwell cursed the weakness that had caused the disastrous revelation. He knew that Dolores had penetrated his disguise and again he emitted a volley of oaths.

"Women always squeal, too!" he mused. "Hell, I might better be dead than have her tell what she knows—an investigation would make a bad matter worse. There is only one thing to do—get rid of her—she can be done easily!" and Chris Buckwell resumed his old smirk of confidence while his cunning brain began devising plans for Dolores' abduction.

The advance of the Marines to Belleau Wood, a plot of approximately ten acres that was "as full of menace as a tiger's claw," was described by a speaker. On the way to this location it ~~was~~ the sight that members of the Marine Regiment saw that made them vow "to fight as they never fought before." # Graphic Description of World War's Fierceness Is Given To Kiwanians By Rev. Bingham later, a group of Marines buried this brave lad with hands folded under the blood-stained flag. It was one of the many impressive sights of recent war. "And so it is with much disgust that I often notice the lack of reverence here in the United States by many citizens toward the American flag. Respect the flag and honor it at all times. Do not pass the colors without showing your respect. And in this time of peace, service club members can join with the war veterans in standing for better citizenship, increased patriotism and respect for the flag. Do not stand for disrespect to the flag at any time."

Ray Conover, professional golfer, was received as a new member of the club Tuesday night. He was initiated by District Trustee Isaac J. Vanarsdalen. Guests from other clubs included George M. Glenn, and O. Sharpless Eastburn, Pottstown; Harold S. Cassidy and George Shoro, Willow Grove. Others included Dr. John N. Rich and Harry S. Hoberman, Doylestown.

Kiwanian Henry A. James made a further report that some good is turning out of the effort to secure better mail service for Doylestown. He read a letter from Congressman Watson in which the members of the club were informed that a movement is now under way to contract with a carrier for a Sunday mail in an out of town. The petition, asking for better mail service, is being circulated at the present time.

Kiwanian C. L. Goodling, chairman of the agricultural committee reported that thirty-six members of the club have signed up to sponsor eighteen members of the Kiwanis Calf Club that will start operation with the purchase of the calves. Two Kiwanians will sponsor each member of the calf club.

Auto Tour To Palisades Is Outlined By Club

From Morristown drive directly north through Morris Plains, Littleton, Parsippany, Boonton, Towaco, Lincoln Park, Paquanock, Pompton Lakes and Oakland to Suffern. From Suffern bear right through Mount Ivy to West Haverstraw. Here the Storm King Highway is met. The road follows the Hudson Valley and continues up along the lake shores to Canada. It passes through the beautiful Palisades section and past the United States Military Academy at West Point. (It is necessary at some hours to pass around West Point where the cadets are practicing artillery fire.)

Continue north through Newburgh and Kingston to Catskill, where it is suggested that the first day's trip end. The drive from Kingston to Catskill is very beautiful, with the heavily wooded mountains, where legend has it that Rip Van Winkle slept for 20 years, overshadowing the Highway.

In the morning continue north to Albany, through more of the Catskill mountain regions. In Albany bear left to Schenectady and then right to Saratoga Springs.

Continue north again through Wilton to Glens Falls and Lake George to Chestertown and turn right past Brant Lake to Ticonderoga.

The strategic importance of this fort led it to be called the "Gateway to the American Colonies," in Revolutionary times. Here the Indians, French, English and Americans met and fought for the supremacy of the New World. Here are a few famous names that appear in history: Champlain, Montcalm, Amherst, Rogers, the ranger, and Ethan Allen.

The fort is kept in good condition and inspection tours are invited. Mount Defiance, one mile distant, where Burgoyne placed his cannon and forced the evacuation of the fort, is a beautiful spot and affords a vista of the surrounding countryside.

You will find good hotel accommodations there. On the return trip it is necessary to retrace the original route to Newburgh, but there will be little monotony on the trip, as there is so much splendid scenery to enjoy.

At Newburgh turn right to Montgomery and then left to Middletown. Continue south through Slate Hill and South Centerville to Port Jervis. Continue south through Milford, Dingmans Ferry and Buskill to East Stroudsburg. On this stretch there is some construction work, but the road is passable. From East Stroudsburg, From East Stroudsburg continue south to Mount Bethel and bear left into a new concrete road that leads to Martins Creek.

Here the Lackawanna Trail is met, which leads through Easton and Kintnersville direct to Doylestown. At Doylestown turn left, drive through Buckingham, Newtown and Langhorne to Bristol.

—Miss Margaret Harkins, of Beaver street, and Miss Agnes Ward, of Garden street, visited their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. George Boyle, of Tacony, over the week-end.

This consolidation of operations will result in the formation of five major divisions of the territory formerly covered separately by The Philadelphia Electric Company, the Delaware County Electric Company and the Philadelphia Suburban-Counties Gas & Electric Company.

The co-ordination of operations as herein outlined does not mean a consolidation of the corporate structures of the companies, but is the logical procedure for the expansion and betterment of service in the territory thus covered; and is a further development of the program outlined when The United Gas Improvement Company acquired The Philadelphia Electric Company. By thus combining engineering and other forces in these three companies, we are enabled to offer our customers a well-rounded and adequate service.

Boston Baseball Fans Welcome Manager Shift

BILL CARRIGAN

ROGERS HORNSBY

When Rogers Hornsby was traded by the Giants last winter to the Boston Braves for Catcher Frank Hogan and Outfielder Jimmy Welsh, baseball wisecracks asked themselves the question:

"How long will Jack Slattery manage the Braves with Hornsby captaining the team?"

So the promotion of Hornsby to the management of the Braves wasn't entirely unexpected. It simply had to come. There was no friction between Slattery and Hornsby, according to Boston writers and Judge Emil E. Fuchs, president of the club. But the Braves had not shown as well as the Red Sox under Carrigan's mentorship; ergo Beantown's interest in the National League team dwindled to an alarming degree.

Bill Carrigan's success in building up prestige for the Red Sox undoubtedly hastened the Hornsby-Slattery deal. The largest crowds seen in Fenway Park in more than ten years witnessed the Red Sox triumph over Western teams. Indeed, many dopesters believe Carrigan will either finish well up in the first division or cap the pennant.

Just how the Braves play ball under Hornsby's peppy leadership remains to be seen. The ex-Cardinal, ex-Giant leader takes hold of the same men who couldn't win more than one-third of their games. Will he inspire in them his own fighting spirit? Or will the Braves' owners seek to bolster up Boston's chances by parting with thick slices of their bankroll?

These are questions which fans are eagerly asking themselves following the deal; and upon the conclusion they reach will depend, in large degree, which of the two leaders—Carrigan or Rajah—gets the break in the matter of attendance.

For there's no use bedouling the issue—Beantown is that way about its ball clubs.

PARENTS OF 13 SWEAR OFF

Here is the first posed photograph of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cromwell, of Bridgeport, Conn., whose controversy over whether or not they should have more children finally was adjudicated in court. Cromwell, a $20-a-week teamster, was paroled by the judge, forgiven by his wife and announced that he would be "reasonable" in the future—all in the brief space of 30 minutes.
